

<<Back

Police investigate dog attack in Conway

CONWAY, N.H. A Conway (New Hampshire) woman who saved a jogger from a dog attack this week fears the jogger would have been killed without her help.

The resident, who did not want to be identified, says she and her sister were at her home the morning after Christmas when they saw two boxers mauling a woman who jogged by their home.

They got the jogger inside. The woman says the jogger would have been stranded outside and killed if she and her sister had not been there.

Police are investigating the attack that left the jogger with serious wounds on her legs and back.

Neighbors say the dogs belong to a Massachusetts resident who was visiting town. They say they have complained about the dogs before.

Copyright 2005 Associated Press. All rights reserved. This material may not be published, broadcast, rewritten, or redistributed.

All content © Copyright 2001 - 2005 WorldNow and WCAX. All Rights Reserved.
For more information on this site, please read our Privacy Policy and Terms of Service.