

Man sought after dog bites woman

A dog owner is being sought by police after his pet attacked a 55-year-old woman in Portishead, North Somerset.

The collie-cross was being walked on a lead in the High Street, when it lunged at the woman, biting her on the thigh.

Police said the bite punctured her clothing and skin and she needed medical treatment to dress the wound.

She spoke to the owner, but he left the scene without leaving his details. Police are seeking witnesses to the attack, which happened on 13 September.

The man is described as white, about 6ft tall with a broad build and a goatee beard.
