A dog attacks a Cheyenne woman as she goes for a jog. Now the woman learns that the animal who bit her was not recently vaccinated for rabies.

"I am scared to death ... I am thinking the dogs going to bite me and I started yelling."

Denise Storey says on Sunday her leisurely jog turned into an all too real episode of when animals attack. As she passed by a house on Victoria, this dog charged her.

"It was showing me its teeth. It wasn't just barking. Dogs bark ... anytime you run by they bark ... this one was showing me his teeth"

But the dog didn't stop there. Bite marks are now all that's left of Denise Storey's terrifying experience which ended with a trip to Cheyenne Regional Medical Center

"I was screaming and I tried running and I turned around and the owner was in the yard and I yelled your dog just bit me ...your dog just bit me!"

She says the owner wouldn't talk to her, but when we showed up with camera's rolling, he said this to us.

"He's a fetch-a-holic and he was just trying to fetch a jogger."

While his owner may think it's funny ... this jogger says she is not amused. Animal control issued tickets to the man but did not seize the animal. They say that city ordinance does not permit them to seize an animal without court authority.
