

18 March 2007

TOT SCARRED FOR LIFE IN DOG HORROR

By ALEX WEST

A BABY suffered horrific head injuries when she was savaged by a pet dog.

One-year-old Paige Foster was at a family friend's house when the Jack Russell sank its fangs into her face, scarring her for life.

But the terrier will NOT be put down - because the breed is not covered by "dangerous animal" laws.

Paige needed eight stitches in her cheek and lip after the attack.

Days later, her blood-sugar levels sunk so low from shock she almost slipped into a coma.

Medics managed to save her - and she was last night recovering at home in Skipton, North Yorks.

Mum Lee-Anne, 20, slammed the decision not to destroy the dog.

She said: "I've lost all faith in the legal system.

"Would I have had to lose my daughter for the police to take action?

"The law needs to be changed. It shouldn't matter what type of dog it is."

 Print  Close

Advertisement

You wouldn't use a tea
bag again and again.

For reliable printing, only Original HP Cartridges are guaranteed 100% new.

