4:40 p.m. - A four-year-old boy who was mauled by dogs on Thursday is stable in the pediatric ward of Guam Memorial Hospital and showing signs of recovery, Nursing Supervisor Cely Mangrobang said.

Mangrobang said the boy awake, alert and hungry – all good signs. She could not estimate when he would be ready for release.

When the child was brought to GMH on Thursday, he had suffered bite and claw marks all over his body and a serious puncture wound to his neck that barely missed his carotid artery.
