A 10-month-old baby girl mauled by a dog in Brisbane has been released from hospital after suffering puncture wounds to her face, arms and hands.

The girl was attacked by a dog on Nettleton Crescent, Moorooka, about 1.30pm yesterday.

She was taken to the Mater Children's Hospital with puncture wounds to her hands, arms and face in a stable condition.

A hospital spokeswoman this afternoon said the baby was taken to theatre last night and was released late this morning.

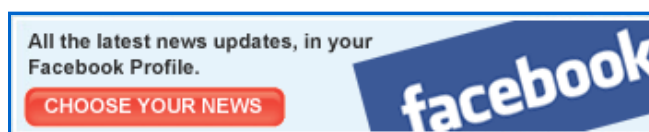

No further details were released.

Brisbane City Council are investigating the matter, but a spokeswoman could not release any further details. Police are not investigating the matter.

The mauling follows two separate dog attacks - one of them fatal - on three-year-old girls in NSW in recent weeks.
