

Pit Bull Saves Owner From Home Intruder

NEW YORK (CBS) — A pit bull rescued his owner from a sexual assault.

Police said a man broke into a woman's spring valley home Friday morning and attempted to rape her. The intruder allegedly crawled through her bedroom window while she was sleeping.

Officials said the woman managed to get away and open her bedroom door. Her pit bull was standing on the other side and scared off the attacker.

"Had it not been for that pit bull, I hate to make assumptions, but I would say that pit bull probably saved that woman from being raped and beaten pretty badly,"

The intruder escaped through the window.

Police don't believe the woman knew the intruder.
